Current Comment

by
R. H. KNAPPEN

A few weeks ago I stood with a machinist friend watching the day shift leave a certain shipyard in Alameda. My friend, who had been working there for several weeks, remarked with some scorn, "All they think about is payday and getting drunk." If true, that was a sad commentary on the attitude of labor in war industries — for those men looked pretty much like working men the country over.

Unquestionably labor has given the nation cause for genuine alarm since the so-called "defense" effort was inaugurated, and it seems to be impossible to convince labor that the defense effort has ceased to be and that the country is currently fighting for its life and that life contingent upon final and total victory. And that, furthermore, we're not going to have forever to accomplish that victory.

Of course, the entire blame cannot be placed upon labor. There has been mismanagement and indecision in high places, and the employers of labor, too, have certain things to answer for. Tremendous profits are being made in some war industries, and salaries and bonuses of relatively unimportant executives, in some instances, have been doubled and tripled. This, naturally, does not sit well on the stomach of labor, which feels that it should get its share.

It seems to me that federal purchasing agencies should limit profits on war materials—set up a sliding scale to fit different situations. For instance, a company with a million dollar contract could well show a neat and equitable profit at six per cent, whereas a small manufacturer with an investment in equipment of, say, $60,000, and a contract valued at $30,000 annually could not make both ends meet. With that set-up wage scales could be frozen at their present levels, and the manufacturer could be limited in his profits.

In any event, it is high time that industrialists and labor climb out of the arena and leave it to the armed forces. Their fighting is much more important, and they seem to be doing it with a complete absence of strikes and bellyaches for higher pay. So let us have a fair profit, fair wages, and an honest effort to equip our fighting men. And let us do it the democratic way, without legislation. A fine start would be the immediate resignation of our incompetent secretary of labor—Madame Perkins. She has been "muddling through" for years, and there's no place for incompetents in our government today.

For the past two months the writer has been laid up and more or less confined to the house. And during the past two weeks the small son has also been confined to the house with that unromantic disease of childhood—mumps. Well, this youngster of mine is quite a radio fan (I can take it or leave it alone, myself), and for approximately twelve hours a day the house vibrates to the agony of the "soap operas." Shades of Marconi! What these people won't do to sell soap! Ever listen to them? Well, all the ills of the human race are mixed to create these day to day accounts of what their authors evidently believe to be the lives of average people: physical ills, mental ills, financial ills, man trouble, woman trouble—in all their myriad ramifications. Not to mention murder, automobile accidents, and horrible sudden death. Why, the average person, subjected to even a small portion of the grief so prevalent in the soap serials would wind up in the booby hatch in less than a week. And besides that, they're corny — surpassed in their corn only by the dreadful drivel of their "commercials."

Concluding the assembly, Miss Delta Courtney sang two selections, "Come to the Fair" and "Our Love," accompanied at the piano by Miss Lois Frisch.

Talks Given to Classes at School

Carl B. Field and Jack E. Murdock spoke to Kenneth McDonell's sixth and seventh period math classes last week at the high school.

Mr. Field showed them how mathematics is used in connection with the wholesale and retail grocery business. He stated that he used mathematics constantly and that without it he would have no grocery business. He showed the class some of the short cuts in percentage, such as dividing by two to find five per cent of a thing, and demonstrated mentally, using such fast deduction that none in the class could follow him.

Mr. Murdock told of the uses of math in the Campbell Water company and its value.

Pots, Not Flares Alarm Resident

Aroused in the dead of night by a peculiar odor, one of our local high school teachers peered out into the night and was considerably alarmed to see the ground covered with flares — he thought. "The Japs!" he thought. "They're dropping flares all over the valley!" Quick as a wink he had the firehouse on the phone and relayed his startling news to a sleepy night man.

"Thanks for the warning," said the keeper of the siren, "but those aren't Jap flares; those are smudge pots. Go back to bed."

(And he did—only partially convinced a Jap parachute invasion was not iminent.)

Easter

EASTER MEANS more to men in years of great travail, personal or national. To all men, of whatever faith, Easter symbolizes the triumph of faith and life over evil and death as no other day symbolizes it. This Easter finds the civilized world in the agony of its Gethsemane. To triumph over annihilation of all that freemen hold dear, the bitter cup of death, suffering and sorrow must be drunk by millions in many lands.

But as the Christ, after the sacrifice of his torment and death, rose from the tomb, so may Christian democracy, after the terrible sacrifices of war, rise triumphant to a new life of peace and happiness. This we may hope with stronger faith as we contemplate the miracle of the Resurrection on Easter Sunday.

Scrap Steel

AMERICA MUST gather up its scrap. It is needed for defense. Overnight we must change, from a nation careless in its abundance to a nation thrifty in its time of scarcity.

Scrap steel is absolutely necessary for mixture with crude metal in open hearth furnaces. Our furnaces will shut down if scrap is not provided. They are already running at less than full time. Scrap steel is any steel that has passed its usefulness in the form in which it was fabricated. It may be a complete but obsolete steel structure; it may be a piece of broken equipment; or it may be a single fragment of ferrous metal. But all of it must be poured into our furnaces to make new steel for the winning of the war.

Scrap rubber cannot be made as good as new, but every lump of it, every broken piece of it, must be salvaged if we are to survive this worst war in history. It can be reprocessed and used in place of new rubber, in cases where an inferior rubber will serve the purpose.

The government believes that every industrialist has some scrap metal and rubber. One eastern company, in answer to a questionnaire, stated that it had no scrap whatsoever, but when the government engineer visited the plant, he was able to point to obsolete equipment and steel structures which had passed all usefulness, and when this material was wrecked, 2,000 tons of scrap steel were recovered.

The program for collecting all scrap in California is maturing. Other states have already gone into action, and California must be equally diligent in delivering to the furnaces every last pound of California scrap steel.

A Real Nest Egg

APPARENTLY JUST to show how they're entering into the spirit of the thing, America's hens laid 3,333,000,000 eggs the first month of the year.

That beats the record of any previous January. Secretary of Agriculture Wickard should be cheered. His call for increased farm production has laid an egg in just the way he'd want it ti. And if there's more gabbing than usual in the chicken yard, the birds are entitled to it. They've set a record. Why shouldn't there be some clucking and crowing over it?

The Measure of MacArthur

AT LAST AMERICA and all the world knows the secret of the stone-wall stand of MacArthur's band of heroes on Bataan. His men knew all the while that with Douglas MacArthur danger to himself, danger even to his own flesh and blood, was wholly secondary to the service of his country.

Because it was his duty, MacArthur placed his little boy and his wife in a tiny speed-boat on a blacked out beach, and set out on the most perilous voyage the imagination could devise. That daring in face of storm, shell, bomb or capture electrified the world. But it was commonplace to MacArthur's scarred little army. He was that sort of soldier, his men knew—and they just couldn't let the great-hearted fighter down when he called upon them to hold, and even to attack, when the cards of fate seemed stacked against them.

Nor can the American people fail their champion, now that he has assumed supreme command in the Australian crisis. U. S. Commissioner Sayre, fresh from the Philippine front, told reporters: "Soldiers and sailors are going through the tortures of hell for us here in America. They cannot possibly continue to hold the line unless we get ships and planes and supplies to them in time. We must match their gallantry. No sacrifice on our part of personal comfort or of special interests or privileges or even of life itself is too great."

The Australian and Filipino and American and English soldiers won't let MacArthur down. The people at home—the ship-builders and plane-builders and munitions-makers and buyers of war bonds and stamps—must not let Douglas MacArthur down now. No Nation could be called great that would fail a patriot and commander of that man's measure.

Navy of the Air

AT SAN DIEGO this week huge American bombers are rolling off the first constantly moving assembly line ever used in building planes of their size. Bombers and flying boats rolling along like automobiles—each with the capacity of several freight cars, each giant of the air containing 106,000 parts, 600,000 rivets and 250,000 nuts and bolts!

America has one airplane capable of a sustained flight to Berlin and back with peak load. Stringing airports across Africa, U. S. aviation technicians are solving the war supply problem to the Middle East. By non-stop air transport America may soon solve the supply problem to Australia, to Cairo, to Russia—to any place in the world.

Incredibly accurate today seems the curious prediction made exactly 100 years ago by Tennyson in his poem "Locksley Hall":

"For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;
Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;
Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;
Far along the world-wide whisper of the southwind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging through the thunder-storm;
Till the war-drum throbb'd no longer, and the battle-flags were furl'd,
In the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World."

A lifetime before the airplane was dreamed of, Tennyson envisioned vast commercial air traffic—a world war fought out in the sky—and a planet at last at peace through ideals of world-wide democracy.

May America's mighty Navy of the Air make that prophecy come true on a day earlier than an anxious world dares hope!

THE BOOK MARK

by marty

"Spencer Brade, M. D." by Frank G. Slaughter.

The author, Dr. Frank G. Slaughter, is a young practitioner in Jacksonville, Florida. His first novel, "That None Should Die," has enjoyed wide reading and high praise.

There aren't very many readers who do not get a thrill from reading Doctor stories. "Spencer Brade, M. D." is a doctor book that will please most everyone. It is a modern tale, the locale being Charlesville, S. C. Dr. Brade got the idea that the M. D. after his name meant 'Money Doctor' and he vowed to himself that he was out to make money, great gobs of it, regardless of the outcome to his profession or himself personally. The first thing that he did was marry for money. His marriage was strictly a business one. With his wife's financial backing and social standing in the city, Dr. Brade got off to a fairly successful start.

The author has created a situation right at the beginning of the book that is true to humanity and warms the hearts of the readers. Dr. Brade discovers that he is in love with his wife right at the start. He feels that he must make money quickly so that he can pay her back the money that she spent to set him up in business before he can win her love in return.

Starting with this situation the author proceeds to develop the character of Dr. Spencer Brade; to tell the story of a man's degeneration; his descent to unethical practices, to drunkenness and infidelity. Through the mill of trial and error, desperate risks and cruel decisions, Dr. Brade passes, but within his heart there lies the love of suffering humanity and the keen desire to be of some help which conquers. It is a heart-warming, gripping story.

The author, in this book, has brought to light a professional phase of the medical field which has not been too widely exploited before.

Aids For Tire Saving Given

Normal tire life acording to Pontiac records is around 20,000 miles. If tires are criss-crossed and the spare tire rotated, this expectancy steps up to 25,000 miles. If, in addition, speed is reduced to 40 m. p. h., the tire life becomes 30,000 miles. Maintaining correct tire pressure adds another 5000 miles. And finally, if the motorist does these things and, in addition, starts and stops gently and takes curves at a reasonable speed, he may expect a grand total of 40,000 miles from a set of tires.

Rubber used in the construction of a battleship is enough for 17,000 tires, and a 28-ton tank requires the rubber equivalent of 124 tires. Another statistic on the use of rubber in the production effort shows that enough of the material to manufacture 260 tires is used for a 10-ton military pontoon bridge. The government can use all the rubber so be careful of tires.

High School Teams Organized

Due to tire rationing and other problems, the members of the Campbell High baseball, tennis, and track teams were notified there was to be no S. C. V. A. L. athletic competition between the schools in the league. Meanwhile the coaches got together to figure out some way to award blocks and keep the boys out for these sports.

In baseball, a system has been worked out whereby three teams will play in a "round robin" league. However, the number of games one team wins has nothing to do with block awards. All awards will be given to best individual performances to be based upon the batting average, fielding average, and other important factors. It has not been decided yet how many blocks are to be awarded, but Coach Steve Casaleggio said there would probably be 18 if the council will approve.

The players have been divided, as evenly as possible, into three teams. Heading these teams are Al Porter, the "Brooklyn Bums," John Krkich, the "Russians" and Reese Parker, the "Yanks."

Games will be played on Tuesday and Friday of each week.

Spring Is Here Flowers Bloom

Spring is in the air with the first wildflowers adding touches of color to fresh green fields and meadows, and, according to this year's edition of the Wildflower Bulletin just issued by the California State chamber of commerce, there are far more areas reported than ever before.

Wildflowers, one of this state's greatest assets are not confined to a few areas, but may be found along highways, in the desert and meadows, along the coast, in the foothills and mountains the length and breadth of the state.

Suggested tours giving specific directions, flowers to be found and the time when blossoming will be at its height is given for the entire state in this Wildflower bulletin. A special section describes the most common flowers to assist travelers in identifying them; another portion is devoted to a list of California wildflowers, giving common and scientific names; and the penal code regarding picking of flowers and shrubs completes the book.

Copies are available without charge at any of the following offices of the California State chamber of commerce: 350 Bush street, San Francisco; Hotel Senator, Sacramento; Hotel Occidental Santa Rosa; Chamber of Commerce Building, Stockton; T. W. Patterson Building, Fresno; and 950 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles.

Anent the Value Of Sustained Advertising

What Has Become of Fatima?

Fatima was a dancing girl whose picture was once familiar to nearly every cigaret smoker in the United States. Fatima, depicted in one of her most bewitching poses, was the trademark on the cigarets that bore her name. The cigarets were the most widely advertised and the largest sellers among all brands in the United States.

What has become of Fatima? That is a question John B. Long, manager of the California Newspaper Publishers association, is asking audiences he addresses throughout the state. Long first asks his listeners to produce any cigarets they happen to have with them. The result always is the same: Plenty of the brands made popular through newspaper advertising, but no Fatimas.

Long supplies his own answer as to the fate of Fatima. Years ago her manufacturers decided she had received sufficient momentum from advertising to travel on her own power. But it did not work out that way. Fatima did not remain the darling of the smokers who turned to new favorites, whose names soon replaced hers in the popular vocabulary. Now they reign in her place and have won the commercial preeminence she once enjoyed.

The example is only one of scores that might be mentioned. If you will search your memory you will recall many commodities that once were best known, but now are seldom mentioned—Force, Sapolio, Pearline, Gold Dust, Duke's Mixture—the list is a long one. Many of them stopped advertising during the world war, and never regained the prestige that had been theirs. Some of them tried to come back but found the going too rough; other more far-sighted merchandisers had established their products.

Newspapers frankly admit a selfish interest in advertising. It is the lifeblood of the newspapers, on which their welfare, their service to the public and their economic independence depend. But advertising also is the lifeblood of commerce and those who fail to keep their names and their products before the public frequently go into a business blackout. Not so many advertisers will allow themselves to drop out of the procession in the present abnormal conditions of wartime; the lesson of Fatima is easy to read. —Marysville Appeal-Democrat.
